Legacy

For over five decades, the Council for Social Development (CSD) has functioned as a non-profit, independent, vibrant research and social development think tank. In 1962, CSD was conceived as an informal group of social workers and social scientists, described as a Study Group, under the leadership of the legendary freedom fighter, social worker and renowned academician, Dr (Smt.) Durgabai Deshmukh. In 1964, a formal status was given to the Council as an affiliate of the India International Centre and in April 1970, it was registered under the Societies Registration Act of 1860 with Dr C. D. Deshmukh as President and Dr (Smt.) Durgabai Deshmukh as Executive Chairperson and Honorary Director. After their demise, office bearers were elected from the members of the Council. Presently, Prof. Muchkund Dubey is President and Ms C. P. Sujaya is Vice President of CSD. With a view to expanding its activities, a branch of the Council was set up in 1967 in Hyderabad which now has evolved into a regional centre.

The vision of the founders of the CSD to build a just society based on the principles of secularism, equality, identity and justice still remain, 52 years later, central to the Council’s ethos. Mahatma Gandhi’s guiding principle of Antyodaya or wiping the tear from every eye continues to form the philosophical core of CSD’s varied activities and is reflected in its Constitution. The founding members of CSD believed that one way to ameliorate the plight of the poor and deprived was by encouraging research and intellectual activity to give a deep understanding of the economic and social forces, put forward new approaches that challenge and support policy and decision makers. In its Golden Jubilee year CSD renewed the vision of its founders at a critical brainstorming session held in 2013 by stressing the need to engage in intellectual efforts to influence Government policy, social action and public discourse for the advancement of the socially disadvantaged.

In addition to the Council’s prescribed role of focussing public and policy discourse towards an overall social development vision, it is deeply committed to pursuing research and advocacy in key areas. The Council’s session at Surajkund, which marked its 50-year anniversary, resulted in identifying new thrust areas and objectives, renewing old commitments and emphasising CSD’s core values.
It gives me great pleasure to introduce the activities and achievements of the Council for Social Development over 2014-2015. It has been an eventful year marked by new collaborations, initiatives and path-breaking research.

As it has done for over the past five decades, CSD continued in 2014-15 its mission to engage in research and advocacy to influence Government policy, social action and public discourse for the advancement of the socially disadvantaged and the marginalised. Several significant research studies reinforced CSD’s mandate. The projects that were submitted this year included, Land Governance Assessment Framework; Trends and Determinants of Food and Nutrition; Impact of some Recent Land and Livelihood Initiatives; The Crisis of the Indian Left; A Concurrent Survey of Mana Vooru Mana Pranali in Telangana; A Study of MGNREGS in Selected Villages of Andhra Pradesh and a Study of Young Urban Women which covered a baseline research of different socio-economic indicators and an examination into the lives of women living in the slums of the old city of Hyderabad.

Additionally, there have been several on-going research projects that have validated CSD’s focus on quality social science research, spanning a gamut of critical issues from health to land governance, food security, education, gender, social inclusion and civil and political rights. Striking a balance between social science research and a grass roots approach, the study topics covered the following: Economics, Ecology and Development: Women’s Road Map for Development; Access to Institutional Credit to Small and Marginal Farmers with Special Reference to SC/ST Farmers; Harnessing and Leveraging the Demographic Dividend through Inclusive and Equitable Education and Skill Development; the Reach and Role of Private Schools in India; Dalit Drum Beaters in Odisha; Climate Variation and Its Impact on Marine Fishing; Unions—New Forms of Collectives in Kerala; Institutionalised Capacities for Development Projects in India; Democracy and the Tribal Voice in Contemporary Indian Politics—a study of Andhra Pradesh; and Food Security in Telangana. The year also saw the formation of Telangana State that has had an impact on the research focus of our South Regional Centre in Hyderabad.

As part of its advocacy efforts to promote and highlight issues of critical concern several important conferences, seminars and workshops were organised. They included, National Food Security Act: Challenges in Securing Right to Food for the People; Challenges of Land Governance in India; Consultation on Disabilities Legislation; Agrarian Crisis in India and Beyond Global Governance: Furthering South-South Cooperation and the Role of BRICS. The Council for Social Development has designed a series of unique training courses and workshops initiated to introduce an in-depth study of various aspects of social development covering both academic and theoretical perspectives. To this end, training courses were organised on Research Methodology in Social Sciences, Capacity Building for Resettlement Management, Capacity Building of ST Lawyers and Training for Volunteers of the Safai Karmachari Andolan. CSD also published some significant titles including, Empowering Rural Women in Developing Countries and Marginalisation, Development and Resistance.

Our signature event, the Durgabai Deshmukh Memorial Lecture for 2014 was delivered by Dr N.C. Saxena, former Member, National Advisory Council and former Secretary, Planning Commission. Speaking on the Challenges of Good Governance, Dr Saxena provided valuable insights on organisational structures and the need for innovative approaches.

Finally, I would like to sincerely thank CSD’s faculty members for their contributions and co-operation in making the Council for Social Development an organisation of repute.

LAND GOVERNANCE

LAND AND LIVELIHOOD INITIATIVES — ANDHRA PRADESH, BIHAR, ODISHA, KARNATAKA AND WEST BENGAL

Sponsoring Agency National Institute of Administrative Research, Lal Bahadur Shastri National Academy of Administration, Mussourie
Project Director Dr T. Haque, CSD, New Delhi
Associated Academic Staff Mr Gitesh Sinha
Project Completion August 2014

Objectives

To analyse the impact of recent land and livelihood initiatives in selected States and suggest measures for improving the implementation of land and livelihood schemes.

Methodology

The study was conducted in five States, namely Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Karnataka, Odisha and West Bengal. Two districts from each State were selected where the beneficiaries of land distributed by the Government and other similar kinds of Government schemes were interviewed. The total sample size was 2,000 beneficiaries of Government land/patta land and other similar schemes, totaling to 200 beneficiaries per district. Additionally, five case studies from each district were undertaken.
Findings

- The average homestead land allocated to landless poor beneficiaries ranged between two cents in Bihar to five cents in West Bengal.
- The families which received four to five cents land did not only construct a house on the allotted plots but also grew vegetables and reared poultry birds and goats in the extra space available and improved their food and livelihood security. Those with only two to three cents used it mainly for housing purposes.
- The allocated homestead land was registered jointly in the names of both husband and wife in most cases, and a single woman in some cases.

Recommendations

The study recommended that the size of plots should be at least ten cents to enable landless families and families without shelter to have not only the benefit of a constructed house but also additional livelihood opportunities. Besides, it was felt, that the land should be allocated in the names of women, as they were better at managing kitchen gardens and other supplementary economic activities. This would also help empower women.

INDIA LAND GOVERNANCE ASSESSMENT FRAMEWORK (LGAF - INDIA)

Sponsoring Agency World Bank, Washington D.C.
Project Director Dr T. Haque, CSD, Delhi
Associated Academic Staff Ms Jaya Lekshmi Nair
Project Completion September 2014

Objectives

Land Governance Assessment Framework (LGAF – India) is a diagnostic tool to assess the status of land governance at the State-level in a participatory manner.
- The main objective of this project was to assess the gaps in the implementation of issues enumerated in selected States and suggest appropriate measures for bridging them. These included
  - Land rights recognition.
  - Rights to forest and common lands and rural land use regulations.
  - Urban land use, planning and development.
  - Public land management.
  - Transfer of public land for private use to follow a clear, transparent and competitive process.
  - Public provision of land information: registry and cadastre, land valuation and taxation.
  - Dispute resolution.
  - Review of institutional arrangements and policies.

Findings

The existing legal framework in all the States that were studied recognised the individual’s right on land. However, due to the absence of any definitive land records an individual’s right on land is not always protected. There is only a presumptive land title and no system of conclusive titles:
- Although there is some legal protection against alienation of tribal land to non-tribals, the incidence of tribal land alienation is high in almost all Scheduled Areas.
- Community land tenure rights customarily exist in some Scheduled Tribe Areas. However, there is no proper codification and protection of such rights.
- In the urban areas of all States, there is hardly any formal recognition of the occupancy status of slum dwellers, even though States have often tried to regularise this occasionally on an ad hoc basis.
- Informal tenancy is not recognised by law, except in West Bengal, where sharecroppers are legally recognised and protected.

Methodology

This project was implemented in six Indian States: Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Odisha and West Bengal. In each State, there was a nodal institution that conducted the study. It prepared a report that was validated at a State-level workshop in which State Government officials, NGOs and academicians participated. Finally, the State reports were dovetailed into a National Report. The Council was the National Secretariat for this project.
Land rights of shifting cultivators in hilly and mountainous regions are not legally recognised and protected.

The West Bengal, Bihar and Odisha Governments have recently undertaken programmes for the allocation/regulation of homestead plots to poor landless families. This has been done jointly, in the names of both wife and husband. The results have been quite encouraging.

Hardly 10-12 per cent of rural women have land ownership/or occupancy rights in their names.

No State Government has completed revision of land records which remain out of date. The process of digitisation of land records and mapping also remains incomplete.

There are provisions to recognise long-term possession of Government lands in most places. But there is no formal recognition to unchallenged possession of private lands.

Except in Karnataka, there is no synchronisation of updating record of rights with the registration process. In Karnataka, the integration of bhoomi (land) with banks and cooperatives for efficient verification of records and determining liabilities on the land has been put in place. However, even in Karnataka, manual records were digitised without determining whether these records reflected the actual details of the land parcel or not.

In the fields of cadastre and registry, the present level of human resource and physical capital investment at present are sufficient only to maintain low or medium-level service standards.

The Bihar Land Dispute Resolution (BLDR) Act, 2009 provides for a time frame for the speedy disposal of causes related to land. In fact, pending land related cases have dropped significantly in Bihar in recent years due to the implementation of the BLDR.

There is no unified and comprehensive land use policy evident in any State.

Apart from West Bengal, informal tenants/sharecroppers have no legal protection and security of tenure.

Land departments in all States have a shortage of staff and lack modern skill sets to perform duties efficiently. They are also over burdened as they perform multiple functions.

Recommendations

- Updating land records and evolving a system of conclusive titles.
- Strengthening land administration through the hiring of adequate staff and training them to deal with the challenges of modern land administration and land management.
- Using innovative ways that avoid land acquisition to access land for infrastructure and urban expansion.
- Involving Panchayati Raj Institutions and other local Self-Government bodies for planning land use and administering land rights.
- Establishing a legal, institutional and data-sharing framework.
- Recognising and protecting informal tenancy as well as shifting cultivation.
- Codifying customary land laws and protecting customary rights of tribal and other indigenous groups.
- Improving women’s land ownership or occupancy rights.
- Allocating at least 10-15 per cent of homestead plots for all landless and homestead-less families jointly in the names of both wife and husband or to a single woman.
- Effective implementation of the Forest Rights Act, 2006.
- Setting up land use planning processes in all States.

BASELINE STUDY OF YOUNG WOMEN PROGRAMME

Sponsoring Agency Action Aid Project sponsored by Shaheen Women's Resources and Welfare Association

Project Team Dr L. Reddeppa, Dr Sujit Kumar Mishra, Dr Soumya Vinayan, Dr Ch. Shankar Rao and Dr Jafar K., CSD, Hyderabad

Project Completion: August 2014

Objectives

To conduct the baseline process on Young Urban Women (YUW) in consultation with Shaheen and Action Aid Hyderabad office, according to the baseline methodology:

- To ensure high quality and consistency of data coming in from the field.
To review and analyse the data coming in and prepare a State-level baseline report.

Methodology

This study required a three-pronged approach for the collection of information: a field survey; collection of data from secondary sources and discussion with Government officials, non-officials and local leaders in the study area; and Focus Group Discussions (FGDs) with various stakeholders. The sample size of this study was 150 young women who were selected from ten slums from Hyderabad. Two sets of instruments were prepared to collate information for this study — questionnaires for the women; and Schedule (basically open-ended) for the FGDs.

Findings and Recommendations

The baseline survey on YUW brought out the ground realities of access to basic and advanced facilities, levels of participation and leadership in women groups, conditions of decent and unpaid works and access to information and services for sexual and reproductive health among YUW in terms of both policy analysis and empirical results. Access to basic facilities like personal toilets and bathroom, electricity and running water was well established among YUW except in the case of childcare centres which were relatively poor. In the case of advanced facilities, YUW were better off as far as access to TVs and mobile phones was concerned, but were poor as far as access to computers and two-wheeler scooters was concerned. The levels of participation and leadership amongst YUW were encouraging which may have been due to several efforts made by both the Government and non-governmental organisations in empowering them. The working participation among YUW was still at a lower level which needed a special focus. The majority of the YUW preferred not to work outside their homes because of lack of basic facilities at the working place, insecurity and a below minimum wage rate. Most of the working YUW were engaged in activities such as home-based pin and bangle-making, tailoring and so on. The nature of work done by them was mostly seasonal which placed them in highly vulnerable and risky situations. Most YUW wanted to upgrade their skills but not in the direction of more professional jobs. The majority of YUW were not even aware that they were working below the minimum wage rate. There was a non-responsiveness among them about key information like working status, the working hours, wage rates, sexual abuse, up gradation of skills and so on. Lack of access to required information and health services was a major impediment in addressing the sexual and reproductive health rights of women. Restrictions placed by their families in accessing such services were also reported. In the wake of lack of available services, home remedies were resorted to rather than approaching health care professionals. In terms of the use of contraceptives, the levels of awareness did not match actual use.

Objectives

To ensure high quality and consistency of data coming in from the field:

- To publish the findings as a regional research study to be used as an advocacy tool.
- Work with the organisation and data collectors and ensure that they were able to develop conceptual clarity on suggested tools and methodologies.
- To review and analyse data coming in and prepare a State-level research study to be published as a report.

Methodology

This study required a three-pronged approach for the collection of information: a field survey; collection of data from secondary sources and discussions with officials in Government, non-officials and local leaders connected with the study area; and lastly FGDs with various stakeholders. The sample size of this study was 150 young women who were selected from ten slums from Hyderabad. Two sets of instruments were prepared to collate information for this study — questionnaires for the women; and Schedule (basically open-ended) for FGDs. Apart from this, timeline diaries of the young women were collected from them.

Findings and Recommendations

Overall, the nature of work, working condition and earnings of YUW varied across groups. A large number of them depended on middlemen to access information and opportunities available in the job market and that affected the way they negotiated the labour market. The evidence also suggested that the average hours spent on paid work was less compared to the long hours of unpaid work they undertook in their daily lives. Given their low education and skills, their earnings remained poor unless they were properly trained and had access to jobs. Apart from the existing schemes, which were mostly funded and operated through the Government, the intervention of non-governmental organisations may have helped these young women achieve their dreams of a decent job and financial freedom. The response to Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights (SRHR) services reflected that only the services of the Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS) were available in most areas, followed by health centres, maternity hospitals and youth centres; additionally, it was found that very few benefited from immunisation centres. Services from family counseling centres were not evident in the study’s results. The present programmes generally were not available to the majority. The analysis showed that the majority of respondents did not receive the services provided by Government institutions. The system of implementation in urban areas had not brought about any qualitative changes in either the quality of life, health services or employment. Many respondents felt that there was need to frame policies to reach people, especially women, though special provisions were available to empower women. The general feeling among women respondents seemed to be that programmes for them continued to face challenges from the policy point of view in terms of implementation, financial allocation and proper mechanisms to reach these targeted sections of the population.

POLITICAL & SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

THE CRISIS OF THE INDIAN LEFT AND SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT ISSUES

Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, Indian Council of Social Science Research and Ministry for Human Resource Development

Project Director Prof. Praful Bidwai, CSD, New Delhi

Associated Academic Staff Mr Harshvardhan Kapoor, research assistant

Project Completion September 2014

Objectives

To take an in-depth look at the crisis facing the Left, along with its achievements and failures:

- To relate this to the Left’s social development models and its neglect of social agendas.
- To assess the Left’s intellectual, political and organisational ability to evolve alternative visions of social development and social transformation, in the absence of which it is suffering a historic decline.

Methodology

Collection of primary and secondary material on the subject and its in-depth analysis. Interviews with present and former Left party leaders, independent analysts, scholars, social development specialists, trade unionists and social activists. Further analysis, and the integration and synthesis of this material and finally the writing of a full-length book on the subject.

‘MANA VOORU MANA PRANALIKA’: A RAPID CONCURRENT SURVEY OF THE RURAL DEVELOPMENT SCHEME IN TELANGANA

Sponsoring Agency CSD Core (from the Maintenance and Development Grant)
Project Advisors Prof. Kalpana Kannabiran, Prof. D. Narasimha Reddy and Prof. S. Indrakant
Date of Project Completion 1 October 2014

Objectives

The study is a quick feedback to capture people’s voices while the programme is underway:
- To attempt a dynamic overview and assessment.
- To suggest directions for the way forward.

Methodology

The study was carried out in nine districts of Telangana State (excluding Hyderabad). Within the district, a detailed survey was conducted in two villages, representing a developed mandal and the least developed mandal. The sample mandals/villages were classified as developed and underdeveloped (based on the status of infrastructure and irrigation). Thus, the study covered nine developed villages and nine underdeveloped villages in the State.

Findings and Recommendations

- The Gram Sabha to be equipped with special powers in lieu of PESA (Panchayat Extension to Scheduled Areas) control over local plans, including the Tribal Sub-Plan; rights to be consulted over the acquisition of land, monitor institutions and functionaries in the social sector.
- Identification of commons to be undertaken and protected.
- Implementation of MGNREGS to be handed over to the Gram Sabha to ensure transparency.
- Identification of beneficiaries in Government programmes to be approved by the Gram Sabha.
- Promotion of bio-diversity through Haritha Haram by undertaking a Tree Census.
- Diversification of Self-Help Groups into non-agricultural activities may be promoted keeping in view the strengthening of local resources such as rearing of local varieties of animals.
- Public Distribution System to be streamlined to promote supply of local varieties of grains and pulses.
- Grain banks to be established.
- Growth of agriculture and allied activities to be based on a pull factor rather than a push factor to ensure employment generation. This is significant since a growth in agriculture is five times a more effective way to reduce poverty than any other sector (according to the FAO).
- Strengthen health facilities at the Primary Health Care Centre (PHC) and sub-centres to cater to maternal health care needs keeping in view the stated objective of reducing Maternal Mortality Rates and Infant Mortality Rates.
- Environmental and occupational health hazards to be identified through micro-planning for necessary action at the macro and micro-level.

RURAL DEVELOPMENT

A STUDY OF MGNREGS IN SELECTED VILLAGES OF ANDHRA PRADESH

Sponsoring Agency Core Project (expenses met from the RBI Professorial Chair Grant)
Project Director Prof. S. Indrakant, CSD, Hyderabad
Associated Academic Staff Mr B. Ramesh, Mr D. Sunder Raj, Dr D. Siva Kumar, Mr P. Sathaiah, Gurram Sampath, B. Anjaiah, A. Satyanarayana, Ms P. Priyanka, Dr B.S. Aruna, Mr G. Naresh, Ms Monika Bhardwaj and Mr Upender Kataria.
Project Completion March 2015
Objectives

To examine the social composition of wage-seekers and benefits derived by them in terms of days of employment and wages earned:

- To study the nature of assets created through works carried out under MGNREGS and benefits derived by the village economy.
- To investigate the impact of MGNREGS on important variables like the market wage rate, the gender wage rate differentials and so on.
- To examine the scope for coordinating MGNREGS work with cultivation activities.

Methodology

The present study uses both primary and secondary data. Secondary data has been used to study trends in days of employment generated and wages received by wage-seekers at the State-level, regional-level and district-level. Further, regression analysis has been used to study the impact of MGNREGS on the market wage rate and the gender wage differentials. In the analysis, both slope and intercept variables have been incorporated.

Two performance indicators, that is the number of days of employment generated per household, and the average wage rate, per person per day, have been used to select three districts: a district with relatively high employment; a district with average employment; and a district with relatively low employment. The three selected districts were Ranga Reddy, Nizamabad and Warangal. Within each selected district, two mandals were selected. Further, within each selected mandal, one village was selected. In all, six villages have been selected for the study.

Findings and Recommendations

With the passage of time, the programme has intensified. The wage rate per day has increased from Rs 81 in 2006-07 to Rs 105 in 2012-13. The wage rate received is below the Government fixed norm as workers do not complete the work specified in the stipulated time. The inter-district variation in employment generated per household is wide, but the inter-district variation in wage rates is narrow. The scope for alternative employment opportunities is limited in backward and less irrigated areas and hence labour depends more on MGNREGS. Therefore, fixing a uniform ceiling on days of employment per household across districts appears to lack rationality.

A regression analysis reveals that the market wage rate in the State increased at Rs 29 per annum (p.a) that is, by 20 per cent, after the implementation of the scheme while it had increased at Rs 2 p.a. that is, by 3 per cent before the scheme.

With regard to gender wage differentials it was observed that before the implementation of MGNREGS the gender wage differential (the ratio of the male wage rate to the female wage rate) was widening at the rate of .012 per annum. It is only after the implementation of MGNREGS that the wage differentials were narrowing down at the rate of 0.018 per annum.

The benefit-cost ratio of works taken up under MGNREGS based on the field study of six villages, spread over three districts, worked out to be 1.8, that is, for every Rs 1/-spent by the Government, wage-seekers derived a benefit of about Rs 2. A wage-seeker benefits to the tune of Rs 9,000 per annum.

Policy Suggestions

To make the scheme more effective based on the findings of the study some policy suggestions were made:

- Households belonging to the SC and ST categories to improve their economic condition work for a larger number of days under MGNREGS. In order to see that the benefits reach deserving households, there is a need to have a higher ceiling on days of employment for rural households in backward and ‘un-irrigated’ areas; to landless households and marginal farmers and households belonging to SC and ST categories.
- The ceiling on days of employment must be with reference to the number of adult workers in the household and not with reference to the household as a whole. To ensure adequate purchasing power to wage-seekers in backward and ‘un-irrigated’ areas, the ceiling on days of employment per adult worker may be fixed at 100 days per annum.
- To improve the monitoring of the scheme, biometric attendance must be introduced throughout the country. Information Technology must be incorporated in the measurement of work completed by the labour group during the week.
HEALTH

FOOD AND NUTRITION STUDY

Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development
Project Director Prof. Imrana Qadeer, CSD, New Delhi
Associated Academic Staff Dr Arathi P.M. and Mr Sourindra Ghosh
Project Completion April 2015

Introduction

Health is not only a medical remedial or prevention subject; it has its root in the level of nourishment of the human body. The observed outcomes of health have to be located within the food situation in this country. Therefore a study on the food situation is of a critical necessity. The State-led-welfare regime in India till the late 1980s saw the slow but gradual increase of per capita availability of food grains since the post-Independence era. The study focusses on analysing patterns of food consumption as well as identifying various components of food, that is, calorie, protein and so on derived from consuming different food items.

Objectives

The nutrition study is focussed on analysing patterns of food consumption as well as identifying various components of food, viz. calorie, protein and so on derived from consuming different food items. The main purpose of the study was to observe how social determinants, like caste, class, religion, work and labour conditions affect these outcomes.

Methodology

Analysis of the NSSO (National Sample Survey Organisation) Nutrition Round — large sample, unit level data.

Findings

Successive rounds of NSS food consumption data from 1993-94 till 2009-10 have shown that the greater part of the post-liberalisation era in India has seen steadily declining levels of calorie intake.

- This phenomenon is often interpreted as a feature of increasing prosperity, reducing diseases and technological advancements reducing hard manual labour that have, in turn, reduced human energy requirements. However, this interpretation becomes inconsistent in the light of new evidence from the latest NSS data 2011-12 that shows a noticeable increase of calorie intake.
- The food consumption situation in India, accessed through direct estimates from NSS data during 1993-94 to 2011-12, when critically examined, questions the validity of the explanations that were offered when food and calorie intakes were declining, that is, till 2009-10. The declining food and calorie intakes during 1993-94 to 2009-10 even among the poor with already very low calorie intake strongly points out to increasing levels of under nourishment and reduction of people’s access to food.
- On the other hand, increasing food and calorie intakes in 2011-12, not only among the poor but even among the richest groups, in the study firmly points out that people far from being satiated would still like to improve their food consumption, if they can afford to.
- The rising proportion of people in the lowest calorie intake groups is also an indicator of distress.

Recommendations

- Better economic policies that cater to the welfare of people. The economic redistributive policies that led to improvements in food and calorie intake in 2011-12 must be strengthened, such as programmes like the ICDS, Public Distribution System (PDS) and the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme (MGNREGS). The denial of eggs in the ICDS programme in certain States goes against the well being of children, under the age of five, and must be reversed.
- Economic uncertainties and vulnerability of livelihoods that have increased with inadequate wages and vulnerable jobs in this flexi-labour regime must be reversed.
- The Government must fulfil its role of protecting the interests of the common people whose vast numbers today makes them vulnerable. This calls for a streamlining of the State-wise identification of the BPL and ABPL population thus making them accessible for social welfare programmes and entitlements.
- Nutrition monitoring systems need to be streamlined and strengthened.
- Further research is called for to assess the impact of prices and stagnating/increasing ill health.
Objectives

To explore the differential patterns of dependency of groups based on gender, caste and ethnicity on forest:

- To analyse the implications of presence and/or absence of groups based on gender, caste and ethnicity on forest governance, in terms of better forest conservation and equitable benefit distribution.

- To explore the exclusionary practices that affect the involvement of groups based on gender, caste and ethnicity in forest governance.

Methodology

The empirical work for the research project was carried out in the State of Odisha. Since the study aims to investigate the issue of ‘presence’ of marginalised groups based on gender, caste and ethnicity, in institutions of participatory forestry in the context of the Forest Rights Act (FRA), 2006, Purposive Sampling served as the best sampling procedure for the study. The Purposive Sampling provides ample scope to select a location which is the most appropriate for the problem at hand. From among the 30 districts of Odisha, Nayagarh was chosen as the study district, from which the villages for empirical observation were drawn. Adopting the Purposive Sampling method, two villages were chosen from the Nayagarh District based on the following criteria:

- That Forest Right Committees (FRCs) should have been constituted in these two villages under the FRA, 2006 for the purpose of governing the forest resources collectively.
That these FRCs should have evolved rules and norms for collective governance of the forest resources.

That different communities should have a substantial dependency on forest in these two villages.

The villages should be multi-caste in nature along with a co-existence of tribal groups. From the two chosen villages, 50 households were selected from each village purposively, ensuring that the sample households should cover different caste and tribal groups. From among the total 100 chosen households, 2 respondents, that is, a male and a female respondent, were drawn from each household. Therefore, in total, 100 male and 100 female respondents were interviewed from 2 selected villages.

The total samples of the study constituted three sets of respondents.

- Office bearers of the FRCs and other officials concerned with implementation of FRA, 2006 in the region.
- 200 respondents chosen from the 100 households of the 2 villages.
- Other key respondents, such as local Panchayat representatives, school teachers, members of youth clubs, and representatives of NGOs related with participatory forest governance in the region.

A combination of case study and interview methods was used for the study.

REALISING SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC RIGHTS OF ADIVASIS

Sponsoring Agency Ford Foundation
Project Director Prof. Kalpana Kannabiran, CSD, Hyderabad
Associated Academic Staff Dr N. Vasanthi, Mr D. Sunder Raj and Mr B. Ramesh
Expected Date of Project Completion July 2015

Objectives

The primary aim of this research programme was to promote positive compliance to the framework of economic and social rights for Adivasi communities along several axes, and to systematically build knowledge in this area that speaks to the complex network of protections that exist on paper and therefore must be translated into rights practice.

Methodology

The proposed programme was located for the most part in Andhra Pradesh, although the questions it seeks to raise and the results of the project initiatives will have national relevance. The field studies were primarily focussed on Andhra Pradesh, except for the policy research. Through this research programme, CSD seeks to build partnerships at different levels: With community-based networks, other NGOs working in Andhra Pradesh among Adivasis, law schools, independent research centres, judicial training institutions, Government research institutes, independent advocates, researchers and academics with interest and experience in Adivasi rights issues.

In carrying out this programme, CSD’s goal was to strive to achieve a shift in the knowledge base with respect to Adivasi communities by translating information into knowledge both for Adivasi communities and in relation to them. To this end, it will involve collaborative action-oriented participatory and policy research; rights advocacy and rights education at the community level; documentation of dialogic processes, good practices and problems through film; curriculum development through the formulation of courses for law schools and social science departments in universities; student internship programmes; law clinics on Adivasi rights; and strategic litigation.

DEMOCRACY AND THE TRIBAL VOICE IN CONTEMPORARY INDIAN POLITICS: A STUDY OF ANDHRA PRADESH

Sponsoring Agency Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi
Project Director Dr Satyam Sunkari, CSD, Hyderabad
Expected Date of Project Completion July 2015
Objectives

The main objective of the study is to examine the political voice of tribal people in a democratic system of India and its Governments and to explore the qualitative contribution of women’s participation in politics and various levels of local governance.

Methodology

The study uses both qualitative and quantitative tools for micro-analysis based on the data which will be collected from two Integrated Tribal Development Agencies, Utnur and Paderu, covering 10 villages with a total number of 200 interviews. The study will use different sources such as secondary sources, group discussions, individual interactions and interviews.

Status

Currently, the chapter on ‘Socio-economic and Political Characteristics of the People’ is being written.

STUDY OF SELECT TRIBAL ORAL TRADITIONS IN EASTERN INDIA WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO ODISHA, JHARKHAND AND CHHATTISGARH

Sponsoring Agency Core Project
Project Director Dr Suresh Jagannadham, CSD, Hyderabad
Expected Date of Project Completion July 2015

Objectives

- Interview artists who have contributed greatly to the folk tradition.
- Explore and analyse the status of various forms of the tribal oral tradition.
- Ascertain the influence of the tribal oral tradition on the socio-economic conditions of the subjects covered under survey.
- Study the intensity of acceptance and the popularity of tribal tradition and within the area of operation as well as in the adjoining areas.
- Study the demographic features of the practitioners of the tribal oral tradition within the area surveyed.
- Study existing opportunities, facilitate the preservation, promotion and dissemination of the tribal oral tradition.
- Trace out the micro as well as the macro socio-cultural and economic factors which hinder the promotion of the tribal oral tradition.

Methodology

Three methods will be used: first, the literary method, second, the ethnographic method and third, field documentation that includes — fieldwork; the collection of songs; recording and videography of the songs; transliterating the songs and translating the songs into Hindi.

Status

Data collection is underway.

OTHER BACKWARD CLASSES

THE OTHER BACKWARD CLASSES: EXCLUSION, EMPOWERMENT AND MODERNISATION

Sponsoring Agency Indian Council of Social Science Research through the Council for Social Development, Hyderabad
Project Director Prof. S. Simhadri, CSD, Hyderabad
Associated Academic Staff Prof. P.L. Vishweshwer Rao, Dr R. Akhileshwari, Prof. A. Satyanarayana, Dr G. Aloysius, Dr Braj Rajan Mani, Ms Nilekha Salunke and Ms B. Swarooparani Shobha.
Expected Date of Project Completion September 2015
Objectives

- To draw up a historical perspective of the philosophies propagated by early reformers and contemporary thinkers.
- Assess movements for social inclusion and their impact on the State.
- Assess the process of modernisation and the development of inclusive policies in the context of the Mandal Commission Report.
- Draw up a timeline of developments on the evolution of the OBC issue as a major national milestone in the history of the traditionally oppressed people of OBC.
- Map castes, trace social and cultural assertion and formation of identity and social capital of the OBCs.
- Examine the political exclusion of the OBCs in the democratic set-up of India.
- Assess the exclusion of OBCs from the developmental process in the context of their occupational marginalisation.
- Study the impact of modernisation and globalisation on the OBCs and its consequences on them in terms of the loss of traditional occupations/exclusion from them.
- Study the status of OBC women, the most excluded of the excluded castes.
- Examine the socio-economic-cultural-political interface of OBCs with other OBC groups and with upper/other castes in terms of whether such interface or lack of it is increasing/decreasing the traditional social distances and identities.

Methodology

Methodologically, the study will combine qualitative and quantitative methods. The study also makes use of statistical, computer and cartographic tools to process data collected both from primary and secondary sources. The study emanates from social and cultural consciousness of OBCs and that can be captured only through qualitative methods such as action research, discourse analysis, participant observation, FDGs structured questionnaires and semi-structured interviews and feminist perspectives. Intensive field studies, workshops, consultations with community leaders, will be undertaken for a meaningful understanding and perspective on OBC empowerment and modernisation.

Status

Compiling reports from various States has begun as has analysing the OBC discourses.

DALIT DRUM BEATERS IN ODISHA: CHANGE AND CONTINUITY SINCE THE EARLY 20TH CENTURY

Sponsoring Agency  Indian Council of Social Science Research
Project Director  Dr Sujit Kumar Mishra, CSD, Hyderabad
Expected Date of Project Completion  March 2016

Objectives

To write a history of Dalit drum beaters since the 20th century, examining change and continuity.
- To explain changes in the livelihood patterns of the drum beaters.
- To explain the role of regulatory mechanisms at the community level to safeguard their livelihood to ensure sustainability.

Methodology

The proposed study will be carried out in Odisha. A general history of these communities will be presented at the State-level but for a detailed analysis the study will concentrate on western Odisha, extending from the Kalahandi District in the south to the Sundargarh District in the north-west. Western Odisha includes the districts of Balangir, Bargarh, Boudh, Deogarh, Jharsuguda, Kalahandi, Nuapada, Sambalpur, Sonepur, Sundargarh and the Aathamallik sub-division of Angul District. In these districts, it is the Pan community who earn their livelihood by working as drum beaters.

INEQUALITIES AMONG SUB-CASTE GROUPS OF SCHEDULED CASTES IN ANDHRA PRADESH AND TELANGANA: SOCIO-ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL PERSPECTIVES

ICSSR - POSTDOCTORAL FELLOWSHIPS (2014-16)

Dr Sivakumar Danyasi Postdoctoral Fellow

Sub-caste groups within Scheduled Castes have historically suffered from social stigma, essentially because of the practice of untouchability that excluded them both socially and economically from mainstream society. The introduction of affirmative action, which includes reservation policies, a slew of development programmes and schemes, especially for the upliftment of these communities may have helped some sub-caste groups. But there are others that have been left behind. In this context, India has witnessed some aggressive movements in some regions by communities demanding not only an equal identity but also an equal share in the benefits given under the aegis of reservation policies and quotas.

The Madiga Reservation Porata Samithi (MRPS) Movement is one such movement in Andhra Pradesh. It claims that the sub-caste of Madigas, when compared to the Malas, has not benefited from the ‘advantages’ that the reservation policy has given in education, employment and in political power. This complex question of differential progress gets lost in any general discussion on the implementation of such policies. Keeping this perspective in mind, an attempt has been made to understand this unequal process by focussing on two Schedule Caste sub-caste groups, namely the Malas and Madigas, and comparing their development status in the States of Andhra Pradesh and Telangana. The research study examines differences and inequalities in their social, economic and political empowerment in the light of affirmative action that includes reservation policies, various development schemes, State and centrally sponsored that target this social strata.

EXPLORING WOMEN HOME-BASED WORKERS IN THE PARADOX OF MAPPING: INFORMAL LABOUR AND THE DECLINING FEMALE LABOUR FORCE PARTICIPATION RATE

Sponsoring Agency Indian Council of Social Science and Research
Project Director and Co-Director Dr T. Haque and Ms Anamika Priyadarshini, CSD, New Delhi
Associated Academic Staff Ms Nivedita Sharma and Mr Prashant Mishra
Project Completion July 2015

Introduction

According to the International Labour Organisations’ Global Employment Trends Report for 2013, the labour force participation rate for women in India has fallen from over 37 per cent in 2004-05 to 29 per cent in 2009-10. The report notes that out of 131 countries with available data, India ranks 11th from the bottom in terms of female labour force participation. Ample evidence shows that Indian women actively engage in both farm and non-farm production processes and that they share a larger burden of work than men. Nevertheless, official statistics reflect a contradictory picture.

Against this background, an important research question emerges: What obstructs the official statistical mechanism which seems to be determined to ‘visibilise' the ‘invisible' labour force at the turn of the millennium, in underscoring the size of these workers? Considering the rising trend of informalisation is there a need to revisit conventional definitions of work and production for the integration of the majority of workers who fail to prove their participation or contribution in the labour force? The research makes an attempt to explore these questions by scrutinising the processes of measuring women Home-Based Workers (HBWs), one of the groups of unorganised sector workers, and understanding from the perspective of women workers the efforts of measuring their size and their contribution to the economy. The research also examines the relevance of the conventional definition of work and production that has been instrumental in refuting the entitlements of over 90 per cent of the total workforce while integrating their unrecognised, underpaid and even unpaid production into the economy.

Women HBWs organisations, along with their international partners, have played a crucial role in the introduction of projects that map women HBWs in India. SEWA in Gujarat and ADITHI in Bihar are two such organisations that have pioneered projects of mapping HBWs in India. SEWA is associated with the women HBWs international network, HomeNet, and ADITHI with HomeWorkers Worldwide. These networks have been working to raise issues of women HBWs and lobbying for their rights for over four decades. The research recognises that the experience and perceptions of people associated with these organisations is important for the evaluation of projects aimed at mapping women HBWs. Apart from HBWs, the personnel associated with SEWA and ADITHI will be important participants in the research. Some concerned academics, activists and media personnel will also participate.

Objectives
- To critically examine the relevance of the conventional definition of work and production in the context of the present-day world order.
- Evaluate the role of the Government’s statistical operations in the historical marginalisation of informal sector workers.
- Study mapping projects of women HBWs against the backdrop of a declining female labour force participation rate.
- Understand the perception of women HBWs regarding efforts to measure their size and contribution to the economy.
- Learn from the experience of those personnel who have participated in mapping projects.
- Analyse the role of women HBWs pioneering organisations, like SEWA and ADITHI, in highlighting issues of women HBWs.
- Develop strategies that understand the significance of measuring HBWs with the help of research participants, concerned personnel from organisations like SEWA and ADITHI, related academics, activists and media personnel.

Methodology

The research proposes to attain its goal through two key methods Firstly, a review of available literature on the following issues:
- Approaches to define labour and work.
- Informal labour and its measurement.
- Women’s movement and issues of women HBWs.
- Mapping projects of HBWs. Secondly, gathering data through an ethnographic study by:
  - Interviewing women HBWs associated with SEWA (Ahmedabad) and ADITHI (Patna), two, pioneering organisations lobbying for HBWs’ rights.
  - Interviewing concerned personnel from SEWA and ADITHI.
  - Interviewing stakeholders concerned academics, activists and media personnel.

Status

Currently, available literature is being reviewed and the final preparation for fieldwork in Bihar will be completed by mid-September. An orientation programme for the research team takes place in September. A second consultation trip took place in August 2014. The objective of this trip was to finalise research plans in Bihar for next six months and also prepare a list of tentative open-ended questions for the ethnographic study with women HBWs, associated with ADITHI and its partner organisations. Preparation for research in Gujarat will begin from mid-November after consulting SEWA.

Introduction

Unlike its neighbouring States in north India, women in Uttarakhand have historically occupied... a central role not just in farming, agriculture and the rural economy but also in the social and environmental movements that have shaped the State's socio-political and economic landscape. So critical has the role of women been in the State's public, political and socio-cultural life that, despite the patriarchal and conservative mindsets that dominates public discourse, it has not been easy to sidetrack their achievements and participation – whether it is the frontline activists of the Chipko Movement, the foot-soldiers of the campaign for a separate State, the anti-dam movement in Tehri where Vimla Bahuguna was as much a mobilising force as the uncontested leader, Sunder Lal Bahuguna; the anonymous activists of the Beej Bachao Andolan or the countless women who managed homes while also farming homestead lands as their menfolk migrated in search of employment.

Despite the very visible and dominant role played by women in grassroots processes that tried to shape the State's development towards a sustainable and ecologically sensitive model, the official policy has inevitably reflected a top heavy and urban-centric approach.

Objectives

- To document the role of women in the socio-political and economic life of Uttarakhand, a State traditionally characterised by the large-scale migration of its male workforce.
- Underline the criticality of a sustainable development model which addresses the topographical requirements and specific needs of the hill State.
- Underscore that the dominant development discourse and policy framework adopted do not adequately address the requirements of the hill people and the peculiarities of the terrain.
- Highlight the important link between women’s participation in various political and social movements and the strong desire such movements reflect for the adoption of an alternative, sustainable and ecologically sensitive model of development in the specific context of Uttarakhand.
- Link the real life experiences of women in rural as well as urban centres in the Garhwal and Kumaon regions of Uttarakhand with the larger development discourse in the State.

Methodology

The proposed research intends to document the perception of women of Uttarakhand regarding their space in the development discourse and their vision of development in this region. The research will begin with a qualitative method in the form of a preliminary survey conducted with the potential research partners. This will be followed by an ethnographic study and some PRA (Participatory Rapid Appraisals). While quantitative methods will allow us to get an overview of the general understanding of a larger group of research participants, in-depth interviews, conducted during ethnographic research, will facilitate us in learning the lived experiences of those lives where the violent implications of development discourse materialises in its crudest form. Finally, PRA exercises like Focus Group Discussions, Institutional Analysis, Historical Transect and so on will help us in understanding the dynamics between smaller groups of research participants. It will also allow us to learn about the research participants’ common understanding of issues, and experience the ways they interact with each other and debate on various issues.

Status

- The orientation of the research team has been completed.
- As has the listing references of concerned organisations.
- Secondary data analysis (population, sex ratio, labour force participation, migration of research sites has begun.
- Interaction with the concerned organisations/individuals/institutions has taken place in Delhi.
- Field research in Pithoragarh District completed.
- Field research in Uttarkashi District has started.
- A mid-term report of the project has been submitted to ICSSR.

WAGE-EMPLOYMENT VERSUS SELF-EMPLOYMENT: OPPORTUNITY, ACCESS AND IMPACT ON WOMEN’S EMPOWERMENT

Sponsoring Agency  Indian Council of Social Science Research
Project Director  Prof. Ashok K. Pankaj, CSD, New Delhi
Expected Date of Project Completion  May 2016
Objectives
The study aims at a comparative study of access, opportunity and impact of wage-employment versus self-employment of women in India with a view to exploring the following questions.

- What are the social, cultural and economic barriers to women’s participation in wage and self-employment?
- Are these barriers greater in the case of wage-employment than in the case of self-employment?
- Are these barriers mainly economic, or social and cultural, as Indian society is characterised by a low level of social and economic development of women including a lower level of freedom, capability and rights?
- Which of the two has a greater empowerment impact and how are these realised in the case of wage-employment as well as in the case of self-employment?
- Is there any specific type of wage-employment that invites greater participation of women, creates larger liberating effects and results in greater empowerment?
- What are the effects of empowerment of wage-employment and what are the effects of self-employment?
- Are there any significant differences in degree, quality and long-term gender development in the effect of wage-employment vis-à-vis self-employment?
- What policy lessons can be learnt from the comparative examination of the two instruments of economic empowerment?
- Are those lessons relevant for women from other developing countries?

Methodology
The study will be carried out in two States of India, Andhra Pradesh and Bihar, following a comparative framework. Andhra Pradesh has made remarkable progress in the economic mobilisation of women through Self-Help Groups (SHGs) and so has ensured greater participation of women in the employment guarantee scheme. In contrast, Bihar has neither been very successful in the economic mobilisation of women through self-help groups, nor in ensuring their greater participation in the employment guarantee scheme. The comparative study of Bihar and Andhra Pradesh is important as the pace of poverty reduction has been slower in the former than in the latter, and it is argued that the successful mobilisation of women through self-help groups in Andhra Pradesh has helped its rapid reduction of rural poverty.

The study will be largely based on a primary survey, although it will make use of secondary sources to contextualise the problems and findings of the study. The primary survey will be conducted in one district each from Bihar and Andhra Pradesh. The districts will be selected based on the level of agricultural development, presence of self-help groups and women’s participation in MGNREGS.

Status
The survey of literature is at an advanced stage. Preparations to start fieldwork have begun.

Objectives
To analyse the demographic dividend available for India up to 2030; its overall extent as well as specific dimensions such as social and religious distribution:

- Identify gaps in terms of key indicators which must be filled so as to fully harness and leverage the dividend qualitatively as well as quantitatively.
- Suggest a detailed roadmap of policy measures, especially with regards to school education, higher education, vocational education and technical education: critical steps that need to be taken in a phased manner to achieve the desired levels of key indicators identified.

Methodology

Based mainly on secondary data and on close interactions with experts in the NITI Aayog, Ministry of Human Resource Development, Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment and other Ministries as well as in the National Skill Development Agency.

THE REACH AND ROLE OF PRIVATE SCHOOLS IN INDIA

Sponsoring Agency Cambridge University Trust
Project Advisor Prof. Muchkund Dubey, CSD
Project Director Prof. Ashok K. Pankaj, CSD, New Delhi
Associated Academic Staff Dr Poornima M., Dr Susmita Mitra and Ms Sneha Palit
Expected Date of Project Completion January 2016

Introduction

Over the last decade, private schools in India have been expanding at a rapid pace. There is a growing perception held by parents that sending their children to private schools provides them with a better standard of education than that which is imparted in Government schools. They believe that children going to these schools attain higher levels of learning. It is, therefore, both timely and necessary, to undertake an in-depth study of the reach and role of private schools in India with a view to presenting the actual picture and making policy recommendations based on data and analysis to policy makers, parents, scholars and civil society organisations.

Objectives

The study aims to examine:

- The reach of private schools, both from the supply and demand side: that is, what is the proportion of private schools as compared to total schools across India; and what is the proportion of children of school-going age who attend these schools across selected States.
- The reasons behind this preference for private schools are based on the perception of parents, children and teachers.
- The economic status of the households which send children to these private schools.
- Examining how parents of children going to private schools finance this expenditure, the financial impact on the household, including debts incurred.
- Assessment of the quality of education provided in private schools vis-à-vis what is available in Government schools. This assessment will be made on the basis of perceptions held by parents, students and teachers as well as an examination of learning outcomes on the basis of one or more of the tools available for this purpose.
- Fee structures in private schools and the way they affect the economic conditions of the lower segment of society.
- Facilities available in these schools. This will involve, most importantly, the extent of their compliance with norms set out in the Right to Education Act, 2009 for schools imparting education to children in the age group, 6-14 years. Other norms, such as those prevailing in Kendriya Vidyalayas, will also be used as a benchmark.
- Implications of the growing role of private schools for realising the objectives earmarked in Articles 14 and 15 of the Constitution.

Methodology

The study will use both analytical and comparative methods. There will be a comparison of private schools with Government schools. For this purpose, a small proportion of Government schools will also be included in the survey. Both primary and secondary data will be used for the study. First, available secondary data will be desk-reviewed in order to assess the status, reach and quality of private schools compared to Government schools in India. Based on the desk-review, various hypotheses related to the study’s objectives will be developed which will be tested through a sample survey. The source of the secondary data will include various reports of the NSSO, Ministry of Human Resource Development, National University of Educational Planning and Administration, the Annual Status of Education Report and other agencies.
Primary data will be collected from both rural and urban areas from selected States. Tentatively, at least one State from each geographical and socio-cultural region of India will be covered by the survey. These will be, Uttar Pradesh from the Hindi heartland, Himachal Pradesh from the north, Rajasthan and Maharashtra from the west, Tamil Nadu and Telangana from the south, Odisha or West Bengal from the east and Assam from the North-East. The number of States to be covered may have to be reduced depending upon the resources available for the survey.

Status

A survey of literature is in progress; work on secondary data has started; the compilation of secondary data for the sampling of States and districts is ready; and States and districts have been selected.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN FOR AN INCLUSIVE IMPLEMENTATION OF RIGHT TO EDUCATION ACT, 2009

Objectives

The National Campaign for the Inclusive Implementation of RTE 2009 is aimed towards ensuring universal, equitable, quality elementary education after the proper implementation of the RTE Act, 2009 with a view towards moving in the direction of a common school system.

Methodology

- Bringing together networks, agencies, organisations working for marginalised sections, Teachers Unions and mass movements for advocating the effective implementation of the RTE Act, 2009 and making it a political priority.
- Raising the issue of inadequate financing of education and advocating an enhanced allocation to ensure equitable and quality education for all.
- Supporting capacity building of School Managing Committees (SMCs) across the country to enable their emergence as strength in support of the implementation of the RTE Act.

ACCESS TO INSTITUTIONAL CREDIT FOR SMALL AND MARGINAL FARMERS WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO SC/ST FARMERS

Objective

To study the regional and social disparities in accessing institutional credit as well as the dependence on informal sources of credit like moneylenders and arhtias (commission agents).

Methodology

At the field level, the study was conducted in two districts each in the States of Odisha, Jharkhand and Madhya Pradesh. Those districts were purposively selected with a higher proportion of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. The study was based on secondary and primary data. Most of the secondary data and information for the latest years at the national, State and district levels has been obtained from the National Bank.
for Agriculture and Rural Development (NABARD), Central Statistical Office (CSO), Directorate of Economics and Statistics, Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperation, State Statistical Abstracts, Economic Survey, Census of India and other relevant Government departments/agencies/publications. A detailed questionnaire has been prepared for collecting data from small and marginal farmers belonging to different social groups. Two districts from each State have been purposively selected — one relatively developed and the other, relatively underdeveloped. Further, one block/cluster of villages has been selected from each district in consultation with local district level officers. Fifty farm households of different size groups from each of the selected block/cluster have been chosen forming a sample of around 300 farm households for the study. Further, farming households in each block have been divided into four categories based on their net cultivated area into marginal (less than one hectare), small (between one to two hectares), medium (between two to four hectares) and large (above four hectares). Information has also been gathered from banks and agricultural credit institutions in these States. Results of analysis of both secondary and primary data will complement each other for further analysis to arrive at the conclusions for the study. Statistical techniques such as growth rate calculations, correlation and multiple regression models, will be used for analysis.

Objectives

The study seeks to address a number of questions:
- What are the underlying factors responsible for the occurrence of the agrarian crisis in the selected States? Has the paradigm shift in the macro-economic framework over the last two decades led to the crisis, or is it the interplay of macro and micro-reasons that have facilitated conditions for the predicament?
- How has it affected the well being of small and marginal farmers?
- What changes have occurred in the agrarian sector in these States during this period with regard to tenancy arrangements and land-lease agreements?
- What are the changes that have taken place in the employment and wage rate patterns in the rural labour market during the period?
- Since the non-farm sector mainly accounts for the growth of employment in rural areas over the last five years what is the extent of the evolution of this sector during the agrarian crisis?
- What is the role of migration in mitigating or aggravating the adverse economic effects of this situation?
- Since a large number of small, marginal farmers and landless agricultural labourers belong to Dalit and ST households, what is the impact of the crisis and what coping strategies are they adopting to sustain livelihood?

Methodology

The study focusses on Madhya Pradesh, Odisha, Kerala and Rajasthan. Those districts will be targeted for the field survey with a high incidence of agrarian distress. The tentative choice of districts is: Wayanad and Palakkad in Kerala; Sagar and Panna in Madhya Pradesh; Ganganagar and Udaipur in Rajasthan; and Cuttack and Koraput in Odisha. In each State, two districts will be chosen, one, an advanced district in terms of socio-economic development and the other a backward one. This will facilitate a more disaggregated analysis and help in expounding the effects of the agrarian crisis on the well being of different segments of farmers. The choice of surveyed villages will be made after consultations with nodal agencies which could be State agricultural universities, Krishi Vigyan Kendras or NGOs, working in the agrarian sector in the selected regions.

Status

The field survey and data entry has been completed in Odisha and Jharkhand. The field survey for Madhya Pradesh will start shortly.

TRANSFORMATION IN AGRARIAN RELATIONS AND IN THE STATUS OF MARGINAL AGRICULTURAL LABOURER DURING THE AGRARIAN CRISIS: A STUDY OF FOUR STATES

Sponsoring Agency Indian Council of Social Science Research

Project Director Dr Akhil Alha, CSD, New Delhi

Associate Project Director Ms Ankita Gupta

Associated Academic Staff Dr Santosh Verma and Mr Chetan Khanna

Expected Date of Project Completion April 2016
The target population will be agricultural households, including small and marginal farming households and landless agricultural households. Stratified simple random sampling will be used for identifying respondents for the interview. The study intends to cover two districts from each State, and two or three villages will be chosen from each district. A total of 24 villages in 8 districts in 4 States will be surveyed. Around eight respondents will be interviewed from each village and thus a total of 2,000 households will be interviewed. The information during the survey will be conducted with the help of structured questionnaires and semi-structured interviews with the target population.

Status

The literature survey of three States is underway while Odisha’s has been completed. Pilot studies will begin in August 2015.

IMPACT OF ORGANIC FARMING ON AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTIVITY, PROFITABILITY AND SUSTAINABILITY: A CASE STUDY OF ANDHRA PRADESH, BIHAR, KERALA AND UTTARAKHAND

Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi

Project Director Dr T. Haque, CSD, New Delhi

Associated Academic Staff

Ms Jaya Lekshmi Nair and Mr Gitesh Sinha

Expected Date of Project Completion July 2015

Objectives

To find out the extent to which organic manure is used in the cultivation of various crops.

- Examine the impact of organic fertilisers on farm productivity and profitability.
- Analyse the social and ecological benefits of organic farming in terms of preservation of soil health, bio-diversity as well as viability and sustainability of small farms.

Methodology

The study is based on both primary and secondary data. The crop-wise secondary data has been collected from the Directorate of Economics and Statistics, Ministry of Agriculture, Government of India as well as from the Governments of Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Kerala and Uttarakhand. Further, farm level surveys have been conducted in Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Kerala and Uttarakhand by selecting two districts from each State. From each selected district, two clusters of villages — one irrigated and one unirrigated — were selected for an in-depth study. An intensive study of paddy and vegetable crops was undertaken. Fifty farm households of all size groups within each cluster were interviewed. The districts and villages were selected in consultation with the Centre for Sustainable Agriculture and Society for the Elimination of Rural Poverty (SERP) in Andhra Pradesh, the Kudumbashree Mission in Kerala and State Government officials in Bihar and Uttarakhand.

Status

Fieldwork has been completed in Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Kerala and Uttarakhand. The data analysis is in progress.

CLIMATE CHANGE

CLIMATE CHANGE AND THE AGRARIAN CRISIS: IMPLICATIONS ON RICE CULTIVATION IN WEST BENGAL

Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi

Project Coordinator Dr Susmita Mitra, CSD, New Delhi

Expected Date of Submission October 2015

Objectives

- To analyse the effect of climate change on rice cultivation and the socio-economic effect arising out of it in two districts of West Bengal.
- To analyse the status of crop insurance and perception of farmers and scientists regarding various changes in cropping patterns and farming system due to climate change.
Status

The survey of literature has been completed. Field survey has been completed in December 2014 in different villages in two blocks in Burdwan Districts namely, Memari-1 and Memari-2 and in different villages in Dinhata and Cooch Behar Blocks in Cooch Behar District. An average 200 farmers from each district have been covered. Entry of primary data is in progress. Analysis of secondary data (State-wise for India and district-wise for West Bengal) is in progress.

THE IMPACT OF CLIMATE VARIATION ON THE MARINE FISHING COMMUNITIES OF ANDHRA PRADESH

Sponsoring Agency Indian Council of Social Science Research
Project Director Prof. S. Surapa Raju, CSD, Hyderabad
Expected Date of Project Completion July 2015

Objectives

- Review the climate variations in Andhra Pradesh and its impact on the marine fishing sector in Andhra Pradesh for the last 30 years.
- To know the perceptions of fisher people on key factors of climate variations that affect marine fisheries.
- Study the probable causes of climate change issues affecting marine fisheries in Andhra Pradesh.
- Find out the effects of climate variations on the village economy and on fishing households.

Methodology

Based on a coastal vulnerability index, the risk levels were classified into four categories: namely low, moderate, high and very high levels in Andhra Pradesh. East Godavari and the Krishna Districts of Andhra Pradesh were selected for this study as they fall in the highest-risk level area, that is, 73.5 km of the entire coastal zone. Altogether, 450 households were chosen purposively for this study in the selected villages based on three generations: 61+ years-of-age group (grandfather aged/first generation); 46-60 years (father aged/second generation) and 20-45 years (son/third generation).

Status

Tabulation and analysis of data is in progress.

Expected Date of Project Completion October 2015

Objectives

- Analysis of institutions (established Trade Unions of agricultural workers, coir workers, fish workers, middle and large farmers) who are now major political actors and have become institutions that have developed a life of their own, on the one hand, and on the other, have become the new forms of collectives since the 1990s. This study will consider:
  - How they mediate struggles and the agency of actors.
  - How differential interests, in particular caste and gender, are represented, negotiated and contended.
  - Examine experiential aspects at varied levels of the collectives and forms of exclusions.

The study will focus on the post-1980s period but it will be located historically as well, within the ongoing public debate on land use and agrarian distress in Kuttanad and on the future of traditional industries such as coir, in Alleppey; and the diverse and contending narratives of development in contemporary Kerala.

Methodology

After the identification of varied forms of organisations, interviews were conducted with leaders, including individual interviews and Focus Group Discussions with women activists of older institutions (established Trade Unions and forums of agricultural workers, coir workers, fish workers, forums of middle and large farmers) mainly in Kuttanad as well as leaders of newer forms of organisations linked with the local governance processes like Panchayat presidents and secretaries, NREGA forums, Kudumbashrees and Mahila Sangams.

Status

Fieldwork is in progress.

GLOBALISATION

FINANCIAL GLOBALISATION AND INDIA: INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL DIMENSIONS

Sponsoring Agency  Indian Council of Social Science Research
Project Director  Dr Rohit, CSD, Hyderabad
Associated Academic Staff  Dr Prasenjit Bose, Mr Kingshuk Roy and Ms Sucheta Sardar
Expected Date of Project Completion  November 2015

Objectives

The project aims at assessing the extent of the ‘financialisation’ of the Indian economy and its implications through an analysis of its macro-economic variables as well as the behaviour of banks, other financial institutions, the non-financial corporate sector and households. The external dimension, in terms of the quantum and nature of capital flows and its impact on the exchange rate and the external sector balance, shall also be analysed. The project will examine whether the process of ‘financialisation’ in India carries the risks of increasing financial fragility and crisis, as was witnessed in the advanced economies and many other developing countries under financial globalisation and draw possible policy conclusions with regard to financial regulation.

Methodology

The research will involve an analysis of global financial and macro-economic data as well as macro-economic and financial data for the Indian economy related to overall and sectoral growth, investment, consumption, credit, corporate finance, household savings, capital flows, balance of payments and so on. In some cases, the macro-economic and financial data of OECD and other emerging economies can be used. The period of analysis starts mainly from 1990 till the present. The standard sources for global financial and economic data are the IMF, BIS, World Bank, UNCTAD and OECD. Data from the Mckinsey Global Institute and the RAVE Database of Credit Suisse may also need to be accessed. For India, the data sources will be the RBI, Ministry of Finance, SEBI, CSO, NSSO, CMIE Prowess and so on. Most of this data is available online. In some cases, like the IMF Corporate Vulnerability Database or the CMIE Prowess database will have to be purchased. Statistical tables and charts shall be used extensively and mathematical modelling and econometric analysis may be undertaken.

Status

Fieldwork to procure data for internal and external dimensions is under progress.

MICRO-FINANCE

THE IMPACT OF REGIONAL DIVERSITY, REMITTANCES AND CULTURE ON LOCAL FINANCE: A STUDY OF MALAPPURAM DISTRICT, KERALA

ICSSR - POSTDOCTORAL FELLOWSHIPS (2014-16)

Dr Jafar K. Postdoctoral Fellow

The research project looks into the savings and borrowings of households representing different regions, culture and migration status in Malappuram District of Kerala. The process of financial inclusion cannot be dependent on the formal sector alone. In fact, it can be complemented by informal practices like money lending, chit funds, other unregistered non-banking financial institutions and indigenous or traditional systems. The issue of access need not be the single factor to affect people’s preference towards specific forms of local finance. Instead, cultural factors play an important role. For instance, the prohibition of usury seems to discourage Muslims to engage with the formal banking sector that involve interest. Similarly, the level of education, nature of employment and access to remittance income and so on may also affect the choice made on the available options. Kerala with high social or human development achievements and an uninterrupted inflow of foreign remittances is a good example to see the role of remittances on local finance.

Malappuram District sends the largest number of migrant labourers abroad and the district’s economy heavily depends on a remittance income. The district also has a unique cultural composition and diverse geography. Thus, the proposed study identifies Malappuram District as a relevant example to understand the role of regional diversity, remittances and culture on different forms of local finance. The study will look into the practice of formal and informal forms of local finance and their relation with the nature of the local economy, migration status and religious affiliation of the households. This helps us in understanding why and how certain regions and social groups continue to practice specific forms of local finance and what is the effect of foreign remittances on the formal and informal forms of local finances in Malappuram.

As listed in the work plan, the initial phase has covered a basic review of literature related to rural finance, traditional forms of local finance and some aspects of interest-free economic systems. Following this, a quick pilot field visit was carried out to review some of the existing findings. The immediate focus will be on framing the questionnaire that covers the relevant research questions on various aspects of the study. Once the final questionnaire is ready, we will finalise the size of sample villages, and sample households to start the field survey and collection of primary data.

SEMINAR
5TH LAND GOVERNANCE ASSESSMENT FRAMEWORK (LGAF)

Date June 18-19, 2014
Venue India International Centre, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Ms Jaya Lekshmi Nair

Objectives
The main objective of the workshop was:
- To discuss the draft reports prepared by State coordinators.
- Chart out the future course of action.
- Allocate responsibility for preparing the National Report.
- Work out a time frame.

Important Participants/Resource Persons
Ms Vandana Kumari Jena, Secretary, Department of Land Resources (DoLR), Ministry of Rural Development, GOL, Dr Klaus Deininger, LGAF Team Leader, World Bank, Washington, Ms Thea Hilhorts, World Bank, Washington, Mr Shankar Narayan, World Bank, New Delhi, Ms Smriti Talwar, World Bank, New Delhi and Mr Satya Misra, World Bank, New Delhi. All the members of the Technical Advisory Group, namely Dr N.C. Saxena, Ms Rita Sinha, Dr I.P. Gautam, Mr Meenakshi Sundaram, former Chief Justice, S.P. Bharucha and Mr Vinod Agarwal. All State-level coordinators also participated.
NATIONAL WORKSHOP ON LAND GOVERNANCE ASSESSMENT FRAMEWORK (LGAF)

Date September 9, 2014
Venue India International Centre, New Delhi
Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Ms Jeya Lekshmi Nair

Objectives
- Deliberate on key findings of the LGAF project recently completed in six states.
- Discuss future steps on how to extend LGAF in other States as well as outlining national support to State Governments for capacity building, monitoring and evaluation of pilots in the context of on-going Central support to land administration in the States under the National Lands Modernisation Programme.

Important Participants

Shri Nitin Gadkari, Union Minister of Rural Development, GoI, Onno Rühl, Country Director, World Bank, New Delhi, Dr Klaus Deininger, Lead Economist, World Bank, Washington, D.C., Dr Animesh Srivastva, Sr. Programme Director, Social Sector, World Bank, New Delhi, Ms Vandana Jena, Secretary, (DoLR), GoI, Mr E.K. Majhi, Principal Secretary, Revenue, Government of Kerala, Mr Ramesh Sharma, DoLR, Government of Chhattisgarh, Mr Onkar Sharma, Divisional Commissioner, DoLR, GoI, Mr Ritwaik Pandey, Commissioner, Land Records, Government of Karnataka, Mr N.S. Rang, Finance Commissioner, Revenue, Government of Punjab, Mr Prabhat Sarangi, Joint Secretary, DoLR, Mr Rajesh Kumar Sharma, Regional Director, S & Land Records, Government of Jammu and Kashmir, Mr Ashok J. Nader, Government of Gujarat, Mr Kuldip Singh Thakur, Deputy Resident Commissioner, Andaman and Nicobar Administration, Mr Shankar Narayan, World Bank, New Delhi, Ms Smriti Talwar, World Bank, New Delhi, Mr Satya Misra, World Bank, New Delhi. Mr I.U.B. Reddy, World Bank, New Delhi, Ms Arpita Sarkar, World Bank, New Delhi and Ms Grace Morgan, World Bank, New Delhi.

Conclusions and Recommendations

The LGAF exercise demonstrated that there are some good practices in all States which can be scaled. At the same time, there some common issues which need to be addressed for improvement. These are:
- Moving towards a system of conclusive titles.
- Creating a conclusive spatially referenced ownership record for urban land.
- Establishing a self-sustaining land agency.
- Using innovative ways that avoid land acquisition to access land for infrastructure and urban expansion.
- Defining boundaries of different categories of public land and assigning responsibility for their management.
- Developing innovative ways to resolve land disputes.

BEYOND GLOBAL GOVERNANCE: FURTHERING SOUTH-SOUTH COOPERATION AND THE ROLE OF BRICS

Dates September 25-26, 2014
Venue India International Centre
Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Dr Akhil Alha

Objectives

The aim of the conference was to raise the following questions:
- What is the impact of the rising powers on global development and to what extent does developmental assistance offered by them challenge neoliberal approaches?
- Can the increased engagement of rising powers with the rest of the developing world be referred to as a form of South-South cooperation? Or are we seeing the return of new forms of ‘sub-imperialism’?
- To what extent do new groupings, such as BRICS, suggest a possible alternative to the geo-political and geo-economic dominance of the West and of the neo-liberal developmental paradigm?
- What are the elements, if any, of continuity between contemporary South-South cooperation and previous forms of Third World-ism?
What possible alternatives exist to contemporary forms of South-South cooperation?

Important Participants

Prof. Muchkund Dubey, Prof. Deepak Nayyar, Prof. Kevin Gray, Prof. Sachin Chaturvedi, Dr Branislav Gosovic, Prof. Achin Vanaik, Prof. Fantu Cheru, Dr Andreas Antoniades, Dr Thomas Muhr, Prof. Ren Xiao, Prof. Mammoohan Aggarwal, Prof. Biswajit Dhar, Prof. Barry Gills, Dr Gonzalo Berron, Ambassador Sheel Kant Sharma, Dr Nagesh Kumar, Prof. Amita Batra and Prof. Neera Chandhoke.

Recommendations

A few concrete, feasible action-oriented steps to energise and foster South-South cooperation were suggested.

- 'Marketing' South-South Cooperation: It is essential to build the South’s self-awareness among leaders, decision and opinion-makers, as well as the broad public, including both by recalling the commonalities of the developing countries’ past histories and experiences and the similarities of their individual positions in the North-dominated system, and by underscoring the specific objectives and goals that bind them today. It is also important to build the spirit of South-South cooperation as a vital and promising road for future development and prosperity, and for greater national autonomy and independence. The Latin American television network, teleSUR model becoming inter-regional and global would significantly serve the advancement of the desired goals. The lessons of commercial ‘sell’ of the kind that large public relations firms practice and the means that Governments use to influence public opinion would come in useful in this undertaking of rekindling the ‘spirit of the South’, which seems to be reawakening in Latin America now.

- Establishing a ‘South-South Commission’: Initially, the South Commission was meant to be a ‘South-South Commission’, one dealing only with South-South issues. Once it was established, however, it defined its own terms of reference to be all encompassing and to cover North-South and national development issues, too. Given what has transpired since 1990, including the highly discouraging experiences concerning North-South development cooperation and a reform of the international economic order, the moment is appropriate for establishing a South-South Commission to address the question of what the South can do for itself through South-South cooperation and how it can influence the shaping of the world order and the future by acting together. The South Commission Report can provide a starting base and excellent background for this South-South exercise.

- Domains of Special Importance: There are several domains in which South-South cooperation holds special promise, including: the application of S&T in the areas of food security, health, sustainable development and management of shared ecosystems, human settlements and urban agglomerations; joint efforts to develop regional and sub-regional infrastructures and links, as the backbone of South-South cooperation; and such systemic issues as a Global Information Order, the Internet governance and its uses, intellectual property regimes, the international regulation of the TNCs and of global finance and banking, global public goods and services and the introduction of global taxation.

- A UN Organisation for South-South cooperation: A UN organisation specifically dealing with South-South cooperation is necessary. Perhaps the time has come to consider entrusting this mandate, on a full-time basis, to UNCTAD and thus enabling this organisation to resume an active, beneficial and central role in the field of development cooperation and global economic policy. It would be free from the obligation to plead with the North for measures and concessions which have been blocked, diluted or refused for decades, and from ‘self-censorship’ on key policy issues so as to please the developed countries. With most of its key functions in key domains of trade, money and finance, intellectual property, technology transfer, transnational corporations and other ‘hard core’ economic issues having been removed from its mandate and agenda, a reconfigured UNCTAD – with a responsive and supportive constituency of G77 and China and without a dependence on the goodwill and policy signals of the developed countries – would be reinvigorated and able to devote its energies and activism to the mission of promoting South-South cooperation. It would once again play a prominent role on the world political scene, like it did in the 1960s and '70s. By focussing on South-South cooperation, it would also be able to influence the shaping of the overall international development agenda and global systemic issues. After 50 years of dedicated but frustrated work for development and the causes of the South, this important UN organisation could thus be freed of many constraints and revitalised by having it focus on South-South cooperation and by renewing its advocacy and activism, in tandem with G77, in pursuit of development goals and an equitable and democratic world economic order of the future.

- South’s Own Organisation for South-South Cooperation: The policy space and freedom of action of the developing countries would most likely be somewhat constrained in a UN forum. Thus, the establishing of an organisation of the South for South-South cooperation should be given due consideration. Indeed, two such organisations could work in synergy and prompt each other constructively. A South-South organisation is within the reach and capacity of the developing countries today.

NATIONAL SEMINAR ON AGRARIAN DISTRESS IN INDIA

Dates November 11-12, 2014
Venue India International Centre, Annexe, New Delhi
Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Ms Jeya Laksmi Nair

Objectives

- To discuss the causes and remedies for problems of food insecurity, poverty and indebtedness of farmers and also suicides by distressed farmers.
- Explore various technological, institutional and policy options for improving the economic conditions of Indian farmers.

Important Participants/Resource Persons

- Dr Peter E. Kenmore, Food and Agriculture Organisation, Representative for India and Bhutan
- Dr Suresh Pal, Head, Division of Agricultural Economics, IARI, New Delhi
- Shri Raju Shetti, Member of Parliament, Dr Satya Pal Singh, Member of Parliament, Prof. Suman Chandra, NIRD Hyderabad
- Ms Anne Etienne, Geneva

Saxena, CSD, New Delhi.

Participants 80

Conclusions and Recommendations

- Farmers should be encouraged to adopt low cost, high yielding crop varieties, with special focus on organic farming, balanced use of micro and macro-nutrients, efficiency of irrigation use and so on.
- Development of rural infrastructure such as roads, rural godowns, electricity, markets and banks should receive top priority for improving the growth of non-farm sources of income in rural areas.
- Improve farm youth’s access to quality education and skills to transform the demographic dividend into productive human capital. Also provide a framework and support system for their training and skill development in the field of agro-processing, agro-services and so on as they are not interested in traditional, non-remunerative farming.
- Improve farmers’ access to institutional credit, as 50 per cent farmers in the country have no formal credit and are in the clutches of private moneylenders.
- Improve the existing agricultural insurance schemes, as these are not farmer-friendly. The unit of application should specifically be the village or the individual farm household not the tehsil.
- Implement minimum support prices with 50 percent margin over total cost, as recommended by the National Commission on Farmers, under the Chairmanship of Prof. M.S. Swaminathan.
NATIONAL SEMINAR ON THE TRADE FACILITATION AGREEMENT AND ITS IMPLICATIONS FOR AGRICULTURE AND FOOD SECURITY IN INDIA

Date December 23, 2014
Venue India International Centre, Annexe, New Delhi
Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Ms Jeya Lekshmi Nair

Objective

To discuss the challenges of agriculture and food security in India in the wake of the Trade Facilitation Agreement.

Important Participants/Resource Persons

Prof. Biswajit Dhar, JNU, Prof. Muchkund Dubey, CSD, Prof. Sucharita Sen, JNU, Prof. Nitya Nanda, TERI, Dr Ashiwni Kumar, Swadeshi, Jagran Manch, Dr Suman Sahai, Gene Campaign, Prof. Anjani Kumar, Dr Ashok Vishandass, Prof. Ashwini Mahajan, Mr Atul Kumar Anjaan, Dr Biraj Patnaik, Mr Charan Wadhva, Mr Harish Damodaran, Mr J.N.L.Srivastava, Mr K.C.Tyagi and Mr Krishnabir Chaudhary.

Participants 52

Conclusions and Recommendations

- Seeking modification in the domestic support rules and commitments in the Agreement of Agriculture (AOA) in the World Trade Organisation (WTO) to ensure that developing countries are not unduly constrained in pursuing the important goal of food security.
- Negotiating for raising the limits on AMS (Aggregate Measure of Support).
- Making explicit allowance in the AOA for countries to adjust their measured support for excessive rates of inflation.
- Negotiate in the WTO for exempting procurement at official prices for public stock holding for food security from a product’s AMS.
- Seeking more policy space to adopt non-exempt and potentially trade distorting domestic policies. Role of special products and special safeguards mechanisms.
- Making a distinction between the use of administered prices for price support and as a safety net. In India, the Minimum Support Price is more a safety net rather than an incentive price to which farmers respond. AOA rules could recognise that MSP does not distort trade.

DEMOCRACY AND DEVELOPMENT IN INDIA AND CHINA: SHARING EXPERIENCES

Date January 19-20, 2015
Venue India International Centre, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Prof. Ashok K. Pankaj

Objectives

- To examine and assess the process of development and democratisation in India and China.
- Understand the functioning of two different models of democracy and development.
- Share each other’s experience in the field of development and democracy.
- Examine whether Indian democracy would remove poverty, illiteracy, malnutrition, and social segregation and expand the economic freedoms?
- To analyse whether the increasing exposure of the Chinese middle class and the Chinese global citizen to forms of liberal democracy create pressure on the Chinese establishment to adopt a more democratic and liberal political system?
- Inquire how two great ancient civilisations will position themselves in the world based on their economic prospects and political aspirations.

Conclusions and Recommendations
CSD challenged the contextual relevance of NHP, feeling strongly that the country needs a policy which assures minimum social welfare service to all. Although the rate of growth in the health industry has been faster than in other industries one needs to pose the question for whom is growth directed towards. A National Policy should reflect the idea of free and compulsory basic health services and be seen as a right for those who have so far been deprived. A policy document is a guideline which sets the agenda for the future. But this policy document completely sidelines the basic issue of public health and appears to be fragmented. Historicity and the spirit of policies brought in post-Independent India which had a goal for primary comprehensive health for all are absent in this document. Instead, the document uses the term 'comprehensive primary health care’ in a reductionist manner, moving ahead on essentially privitised service of medical care. Also, the policy tends to repeats itself when it discusses matters related to convergence and does not take into account previous policy recommendations made by the Government of India, including valid recommendations made by the Convergence Committee of the Twelfth Plan. That people with public health expertise are not part of the deliberations of the NHP is evident in its lack of an interdisciplinary approach. The State’s autonomy has been compromised with the involvement of multinational private individuals in policy making. A lack of knowledge of grassroots level healthcare functioning is evident in an analysis of the NHP.

NATIONAL SEMINAR ON A RESILIENT FUTURE FOR SMALL FARMERS - CARITAS

Dates March 10-12, 2015
Venue India International Centre, New Delhi
Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinators Dr T. Haque and Ms Jaya Lekshmi Nair

Objectives
The main objective of the conference was to discuss the issues and challenges of smallholder farmers in the context of climate change. The workshop was also intended to discuss innovations and best practices and gauge the potential for building a resilient future for smallholder farmers.

Important Resource Persons/Participants
Shri Nitin Gadkari, Minister of Rural Development, GoI, Shri Raju Shetty, Member of Parliament, Dr P.K. Joshi, Director in Asia, IFPRI and Dr A.K. Sikka, Deputy Director-General, Indian Council of Agricultural Research.

Participants 200

Conclusions and Recommendations
- Organise small farmers along the lines of co-operatives and producer groups which will improve their bargaining power in the market.
- Give incentives to small farmers to adopt appropriate technologies to meet the challenges of climate change.
- There should be Government supported comprehensive agricultural insurance scheme, covering crops, livestock and the health of small farmers in the country.
- Small farmers should be given training and incentives to adopt organic farming which will help reduce the cost of production and improve soil health and productivity.

NATIONAL SEMINAR ON A STRATEGY FOR THE ELIMINATION OF POVERTY IN JHARKHAND

Date March 20, 2015
Venue India International Centre, New Delhi
Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Seminar Coordinator Prof. K.B. Saxena

Objective
To discuss how the State can be liberated from the paradox of poverty amidst plenty and be put on the path of rapid growth.

Important Participants/Resource Persons
Mr B.K. Sinha, former Secretary, Rural Development, GoI, Mr Nishikant Dubey, Prof. K.B. Saxena, former Secretary, Rural Development, GoI and Visiting Professor, CSD.

Recommendations
- Improve the governance system by way of capacity building of civil servants and make political functionaries accountable for what they do.
- Implement minimum wages for agricultural labourers effectively.
- Improve and protect the asset base of the poor, especially Dalits and the tribals.
- Improve infrastructure such as roads, markets and electricity supply without which the industrial base of the State cannot be broadened.
- Provide social security to both the rural and urban poor.

NATIONAL CONSULTATION ON DISABILITIES LEGISLATION

Sponsoring Agency Council for Social Development, Hyderabad
Date April 15-18, 2014
Venue Council for Social Development, Hyderabad
Seminar Coordinators Mr Pavan Muntha and Dr Soumya Vinayan

Objectives
The main objective of the consultation was to provide a platform to academia and activists working in the disability sector to reflect on these two crucial legislations and submit a report to the Standing Committee on Social Justice and Empowerment.

Important Participants/Resource Persons
Mr Pavan Muntha, Swaadhikaar Centre for Disabilities Information, Research and Resource Development, Ms Smitha Sadasivan, Disabilities Legislation Unit, Vidyasagar, Mr Rajiv Rajan and Mr Dheepak Parthasarathy, Ektha, Mr S. Conclusions and Recommendations
The following recommendations were made: inclusion of ‘barriers’ in the definition of Person with Disabilities; inclusion of a clear definition of the terms, discrimination, abuse, exploitation, harassment and violence; recognising the role of the private player in the definition of establishment; a separate section on the Rights of Women and Children with Disabilities; inadequacies of section on ‘Legal Capacity’ and ‘Guardianship’; separate chapter on non-discrimination in employment; certification to hold an all-India validity; Disability Rights Tribunal instead of Special Court provisions; detailed provision for a National/State fund. Removal of the clause which allows termination of pregnancy with the consent of a registered medical practitioner and guardian. In addition, the recommendations for changes in other statutes to be in sync with the present Bill were also deliberated during the consultation and submitted to the Standing Committee. In December 2014, a delegation from CSD, comprising Dr Soumya Vinayan and Ms Kriti Sharma presented the key recommendations to the Standing Committee of Parliament.

NATIONAL SEMINAR ON LABOUR MARKET AND ISSUES OF ADIVASIS
(In collaboration with SR Sankaran Chair, National Institute of Rural Development–NIRD – and Panchayati Raj–PR–Hyderabad)

Sponsoring Agency S.R. Sankaran Chair, NIRD & PR, Hyderabad
Date January 22-23, 2015
Venue Conference Hall-I, NIRD & PR, Hyderabad
Seminar Coordinators S.R. Sankaran Chair, NIRD & PR and CSD, Hyderabad

Objectives
The seminar focus was on the issues of displacement, informalisation and dissent; poverty, deprivation, stagnation and marginalisation; livelihood patterns; State policy and its impact; and women, children, PVTGs and de-notified tribes.

Important Participants/Resource Persons
Prof. R. Radhakrishna, Chairperson, CESS, Hyderabad, Dr M.V. Rao, IAS, Director-General, NIRD & PR, Prof. C.H. Hanumantha Rao,
Conclusions and Recommendations

In the seminar, 24 research papers were presented on various aspects of tribal development covering all the demographic and geographic accounts of tribal representation. The papers clearly explained the process of marginalisation of STs in terms of landholders to landless; main workers to marginal workers after globalisation; growing impoverishment among tribals and increasing control of resources by non-tribals in Fifth Schedule Areas; non-utilisation of TSP budgets; poor governing systems and a non-commitment of the Government in bridging the levels of standard of living among tribals on par with others. The papers clearly explained the dynamics of migration for sustenance and livelihood improvement in the context of globalisation, urbanisation and development. The seminar calls for action on reverse land degradation; protection of minimum wages and implementation of the Employment Act to ensure sustainable livelihood.

Dates: November 24-28, 2014
Venue: India International Centre, Main, Lecture Room-II
Sponsoring Agency: Council for Social Development, New Delhi
Coordinator: Dr. Ghazal Jamil

Objectives
- To develop resettlement planning, implementation and monitoring skills and to familiarise participants with:
  - The resettlement issue in development.
  - The methodology of assessing impacts and planning, implementing and monitoring of resettlement.
  - Lessons from the experiences of various ongoing as well as completed projects. While the core objectives of this workshop remain unchanged, its content saw a new emphasis on the best practices followed in the area of resettlement.

Important Participants/Resource Persons
Officials from NTPC, Mahanadhi Coal Ltd and students of JNU, IIM and ISEC.

Participants: 20
Topics Covered

Displacement and Resettlement in a Globalising World; Acquisition of Private Land for Development Purposes; Social Impact Assessment and Resettlement Planning; Generating New Income Earning Opportunities for Displaced People; Beyond Compensation: Emerging Approaches to Resettlement; Planning for Vulnerable Groups (Gender Concerns, Tribal Peoples’ Issues); Stakeholder Participation in Resettlement; Institutional Arrangements for Effective Resettlement Implementation; The Role of NGOs in Resettlement and Monitoring Resettlement Operations.

Conclusions

The feedback from participants was very positive on all counts. They found the course well designed that met their needs. The course coverage was termed comprehensive and well thought out. On the presenters, the participants believed that CSD selected leading experts who completely engaged their audience. Finally, they expressed the desire that they should be kept informed about such CSD programmes in the future as well.

LIBRARY

Professor Amar Kumar Singh Library, New Delhi

The Council for Social Development has a functioning library, since its establishment in 1962. It was reorganised in 1998 and named the Professor Amar Kumar Singh Library (PAKSL) in the memory of late Professor Amar Kumar Singh, former Executive Chairperson of CSD. Located in the basement of the main building, it remains open from 9.30 am–5.30 pm on all working days. It mainly caters to the needs of its own faculty and researchers, but outsiders are also allowed with special permission.

The library collection is in the Social Sciences and Humanities and is housed subject-wise. It has over 10,000 books ranging from the classics to the contemporary. It subscribes to 29 journals and periodicals, 17 daily newspapers and an online database, Economic & Political Weekly. Most journals and periodicals available since 1989 are in bound volumes, arranged alphanumerically according to Dewey Decimal Classification Number. The library operations have been automated using LIBMAN—integrated library software. It maintains a database of books, Social Change articles, reports and periodicals on a regular basis, accessible through the Council’s Local Area Network (LAN). The library is an institutional member of DELNET and NASSDOC and is a Corporate Member of the Central Secretariat Library, New Delhi.

During the period April 2014 to March 2015, 271 new titles were acquired, including books, reports, bound volumes, CD-ROMs, reference documents and monographs. The process of digitising CSD publications has started.

KALPANA KANNABIRAN
Regional Director, CSD

Over the past 25 years, Dr Kannabiran has been consistently researching and writing on the areas of sociology of law, social movements, gender studies, disability studies and jurisprudence – especially focussing on non-discrimination and criminal law. A trained sociologist and lawyer, she has combined research, teaching (law and sociology), activism, pro-bono socio-legal counseling and rights advocacy in her work. Her research over the years has notably on women and gender studies. Her edited collection, Violence of Normal Times: Essays on Women’s Lived Realities, brings forth new dimensions to the understanding of violence against women. Her co-authored book, Muvalur Ramanirthammal’s Web of Deceit: Devadasi Reform in Colonial India, crystallising her concerns on colonial jurisprudence, emerged out of her PhD thesis which she holds from Jawaharlal Nehru University. Dr Kannibaran’s engagement with violence has been a running theme in her writing evident in the editing of a collection of original essays on Violence Studies for OUP. She has also compiled and edited two successive NGO Alternative Reports on CEDAW for the National Alliance of Women-India, presented in January 2007 in New York and in July 2014 in Geneva. Her current research concerns include labour in indigenous communities; the meaning of the right to education for the Chenchus and internally displaced tribal communities in Andhra Pradesh; and disability. She is also coordinating a fellowship programme for Scheduled Tribe lawyers aimed at strategic rights litigation and the development of practice guides for lawyering. Dr Kannabiran received the Rockefeller Humanist-in-Residence Fellowship at Hunter College, City University of New York, 1992-1993; the VKRV Rao Prize for Research in Social Sciences, 2003; and the Amartya Sen Award for Distinguished Social Scientists, 2012. L. REDDEPPA
Associate Professor

Dr L. Reddeppa holds a PhD in economics from S.V. University, Tirupathi. As an economist, Dr Reddeppa has, over the past two decades, specialised in two broad areas: small Industry and self-employment; and the development of vulnerable groups. Within these areas, he has conducted independent research on micro-credit, having closely studied State welfare programmes in the sectors of minor irrigation, horticulture, land purchase and distribution, animal husbandry and agriculture and allied activities. His long term work on the economic support schemes offered by the Government to vulnerable sections has focussed on the degree and extent to which these schemes have had a positive impact on family income, livelihood and food security, and the extent to which the goal of poverty alleviation has been met. With wide ranging experience in quantitative and qualitative research, Dr Reddeppa has participated in numerous national and international seminars, directed nineteen studies, and published sixteen papers in journals and edited volumes. His most recent publication, Food Security in India (Delhi: Kanishka) was published in 2011. In terms of the future trajectory of his work, Dr Reddeppa remains concerned with operational problems in achieving the maximum inclusion of the very poor in the framework of entitlements; measurement of income poverty; budget leakages in the name of poverty alleviation; and effective strategies for the realisation by the State of the guarantee of universal access to basic infrastructure for sustainable development, especially of the poor and vulnerable.
